

2009

James W. Henderson

Class of 1965

James Henderson is the vice chairman of the Lahey Clinic and chairman of the Middlesex Community College Foundation. For 25 years, he led Analytical Systems Engineering Corporation, which provided communication information technology and security installations for the United States government and other countries. Henderson stayed in that role through several mergers and was president at Affiliated Computer Services Defense until 2001.

He also served as a captain in the U.S. Air Force. His board positions have included chairman of the board of Middlesex Community College, Baybank Middlesex and Alpha Industries; he was chairman emeritus of the North Suburban Chamber of Commerce and president of several industrial associations.

Additional degree: Harvard Business School