

Richard L. Pease

Class of 1967

Richard Pease began his career with General Electric as an aerospace design engineer. He served as a business leader in various segments of the company, including as president and CEO of the European Automation group in Frankfurt, Germany, until 1990.

He later became president and CEO of General Electric's Power Controls Technology in Duluth, Ga. Pease also served on various boards including GE Toshiba, GE Fuji and GE Hitachi, GE IUSA and GE Prolec, all in Japan and Mexico.

He is also on the board of directors for Junior Achievement and is active in many community volunteer organizations.

Additional degree: Master's degree, Syracuse University

