

2000

Dr. James W. Stark

---

Class of 1951

James Stark has been recognized as an Outstanding Educator of America and has received a complement of honors from national and international organizations. He was involved in teaching, administrative or consultative roles at Northrop University, West Coast University, Ambassador College, Pepperdine University and UCLA, to name a few. Many of his positions in education led Stark to assignments around the globe.

Stark was involved in research and publications, and did consulting work for industrial administration and corporate management companies as diverse as Hughes Aircraft and Xerox.

He served as president and chief executive officer of Systems Research Association, which uses economic theory and productivity plans to assist developing countries and provide food for communities. In conjunction, he works with Heifer International, a World Hunger Organization that supplies knowledge/training and purebred animals to small farms both domestically and internationally.

Additional degrees: M.A., UCLA; Ph.D., The International University in Luxembourg; Ph.D., U.S. International University in San Diego

